All-Out Effort Planned To Bar Meredith

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) -- Surprise legal steps may be in the offing as Mississippi attempts to stifle a Negro's pursuit for education at the all-white University of Mississippi.

Gov. Ross Barnett indicated late Tuesday the state would use all legal means to prevent James H. Meredith from becoming the first Negro to attend Ole Miss. The governor predicted attempts would be successful.

Barnett declined to discuss details of legal plans under consideration after a day-long series of meetings with state officials and attorneys. He said, however, the state was considering several possible moves.

Speculation on what steps the state would take ranged from closing the university to interposing the sovereignty of the state between the U.S. Supreme Court desegregation ruling and the university.

Sources close to state officials indicated there might be several other moves in the making, however, and Barnett commented:

"We plan to avail ourselves of every legal weapon possible. We see several possible methods of blocking his entry.

Barnett warned the state would tolerate no violence if Meredith, a 29-year-old Kosciusko Air Force veteran, appeared on the Oxford

Calling Out Reserves Won't Scare Soviets

Last year, during the crisis that followed the completion of the Berlin Wall, President Kennedy called up several divisions of Army reserves. While there were many complaints and gripes, there was never any question of the President's authority for Now, with the news stories of the Cuban-Russian military activity coming in just before the fall elections, Mr. Kennedy has called on Congress to grant him standby authority to call up reserves if they are needed.

He does not need such authority. Perhaps what he has in mind is the sidetracking of criticism which probably will result again if he should put several divisions of reserves back into uniform. Thus, when the trainees or their families began to voice complaints, he could say, "Congress agreed to this callup."

It is natural that U.S. citizens are disturbed over what is happening in Cuba. And they expect the President and other federal officials to do something. But a proposed reserve reactivation is hardly the answer. Last year's callup didn't knock one block out of the Berlin wall, and the Soviets didn't give an inch anywhere along the line.

It follows, then, that a callup later this fall wouldn't change the Cuban situation. The United States already has ample military strength to take over Cuba. There are also sufficient naval forces for a sea blockade. All that is needed is decision and action.

The State Department has pointed out that an exchange of letters between Truman Krushchev know we are permitand Stalin in 1949-50 gave free access to all, in and out of Berlin, to end the blockade of should consider methods to prethat city. We've lost out on that one.

There is also the abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine in Cuba. This was a gradual development over two administrations.

In neither case will a callup of U.S. reservists do very much to reverse a whole series of unhealthy decisions.

Poet Frost Carries Culture To Summit

President Woodrow Wilson introduced the professor in politics to the American scene. Now Robert Frost has had a meeting of minds with Khrushchev for the first occasion of a poet at the summit. And Khrushchev had an unkind message for all American lib-

Said the poet, who read some of his work action — or inaction — of his Administration. Here are the 1960 to add a note of culture to President Kennedy's inauguration, "we didn't pretend to like

Maybe not, but the very gesture of traveling all the way to Khrushchev's resort at Gagra on the Black Sea is proof enough that the poet does not dislike the Russian ruler.

What did this good will journey gain for the United States? Nothing except a grain of truth from Khrushchev for the American liberals who have followed a soft line toward communism. Here is the message as Frost gave it to newsmen on his return:

"Khrushchev said he feared for us modern liberals. He said we were too liberal to fight. I suppose he thought we'd stand there for the next hundred years saying, 'On the one hand-but on the other hand."

In another news dispatch from Moscow, Frost quoted the Soviet Premier as saying, "None of your liberal sapheads for me."

This should furnish the "handwriting on the wall" for the several factions in the United States who have maintained that we could exist in the same world with Russia if only we'd show a little faith and trust.

While we were showing Russia how to build factories and sending her the machinery free of charge during Warld War II, the Soviet government was putting our pilots in autos with the curtains drawn and hustling them to locked hotels in Moscow. These same pilots were flying American-built airplanes to Russia, but they were forbidden to see anything in that country.

Now our semi-official poet visits the Soviet Union, hoping, by his own admission, to persuade Khrushchev to compete with the United States in "strife and magnanimity." Russia is no newcomer to the field of strife. but ask any immigrant or U.S. citizen from that country when there was ever any sort of magnanimous gesture from any Russian government to its own subjects.

Back in 1839, opera composer Richard Wagner decided to leave a post in Riga, in Russia at that time, and move to Paris. Then as now, he found himself walled in, and he had to sneak out through barbed wire and ditches. Russia is the only nation on earth which has set the "magnanimous" policy of walling in its people.

To climax the meeting, poet Frost said he told the Russians they were relaxing a bit and "humanizing a little down from the severity of their ideals-easing off toward democracy." "And they let me get away with it," he said.

Kennedy Thinking On Castro Modified Since 1960

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

'We must let Mr. Castro know we don't intend to be pushed We must let Mr. ting no expansion of his foothold our hemisphere vent goods from being shipped to Castro via a third country. The words are not those of Republican National Chairman Bill Miller, Or GOP Senator Ken Keating. Or Arizona's Barry Goldwa-They are, instead, the 1960 campaign utterances of John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Things have changed since candidate Kennedy roamed the United States two years ago blasting a Republican Administration for standing idly by as a Communist state was born 90 miles from

IT WAS, perhaps, his biggest single issue. On more than 120 occasions nominee Kennedy talked of Cuba. He laid the blame for Castro's rise on Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon. He promised that steps would be taken to end Castro's grip on Cuba.

To the man in the White House, it might now be unfair to compare his campaign statements with the words of John Kennedy, neverthe-

"We must attempt to strengthen the non - Batista, democratic - Castro forces in exile, and in Cuba itself, who offer eventual hope of overthrowing Castro. Thus far these fighters for freedom have had virtually no support from our Government.

Several months after his inauguration President Kennedy directed an abortive invasion of Cuba that had literally no chance of success. Current attempts to strengthen the democratic anti-Castro forces in exile, and in Cuba" are non - existent.

THE EXILES say the Central Intelligence Agency spies not on Castro but on the anti - Castro leaders. Denver Post correspondent Robert K. Brown reports that 'anti - Castro military activity in the Caribbean and Miami area has reached an all - time low.' Cuban exiles "have learned to hate the CIA" for its inaction.

'We must end the harassment, which this government has carried out, of liberty - loving anti - Castro forces in Cuba and other lands. While we cannot violate international law, we must recognize that these exiles and rebels represent the real voice of Cuba, and should not be constantly handicapped by our Immigration and Justice Department

'Reasoning' Behind Official's Odd Statement On Space

By HOLMES ALEXANDER

What is the rationale behind Deputy Secretary of Defense Gilpatric's astonishing statement that the United States is determined to be second in placing thermonuclear weapons

I have learned that the decision announced by Gilpatric before a group of industrialists at South Bend, Indiana, was cleared at the White House (and not discussed in the Space Council where such matters would normally go) on these premises:

1. AMERICAN policy in Space is defensive rather than offensive. This idea is derived from the preamble of the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958, which dedicates the effort peaceful purposes for the benefit of all mankind." Present policy is considered an interpretation of the Space Act by the Administration. thought is that, while we will not, unless pushed into it, plan a Space program of weapons to destroy our enemies, we will and do have a program aimed at discovering and destroying hostile missiles, bombs and vehicles in Space. Retaliation will be taken upon enemey hardware and 'bases" up there, but not upon the enemy homeland and popu-2. American policy still holds, here in the Space age, that we can best hit Soviet targets with our land - and - sea - based missiles, and that the time lag of an enemy missile fired from Space us considerable allow warning to take appropriate

3. American policy concedes to the enemy the advantage of nu-"blackmail" from Space. That is, we would not put any weapon into Space for the purpose of threatening the enemy. or of seeking the traditional military advantage of getting there first with the most. The idea is to get there second, if we must, and to hope that the enemy doesn't force us to do that.

The Kennedy military policy for Space, although defensive, aspirational and pacific, is nevertheless quite an improvement over that of President Eisenhow-- who seemingly had no policy at all. The National Space Act called for the establishment of an Aeronautics and Space Council. but Ike did nothing about it. When JFK took over, pointed the distinguished Dr. Ed-Welsh, a lean and keen man with that sort of mind, to be Executive Secretary of the Council. Welsh, who had been staff director and brain trust of the Symington Air Power Subcommittee, found in March, 1961, that he had no money under the lame - duck Eisenhower budget. He obtained some from President Kennedy's emergency fund, set up an office, and collected a staff. Then he drafted an important amendment to the Space Act. It provided that the energetic Vice President Johnson should be chairman of the Council, its other members being the Secretaries of Defense and State, the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Administrator of NASA.

Without these prompt and perceptive actions by Welsh, there would be no national Space policy today. There would be only the separate and often - conflicting policies of Defense, State. NASA and AEC. The first major decision of the Council was to advise the President to accelerate Project Apollo. Mr. Kennedy announced in early 1961 that we would put explorers on the moon during the sixties, several years ahead of the leisurely Eisenhower schedule.

THE MOST significant military decision of the Space Council, because it involved the first nuclear device in Space, had to do with the project called SNAP (Systems for Nuclear Auxiliary Power). For some time the AEC had wanted to test the feasibility of a nuclear - powered battery to send back signals from navigational satellites. The Defense Department, too, favored a tsst of this capability, but the State Department objected for a foreign relations reason. The inclination of the SNAP - carrying Transit IV-A vehicle from Cape Canaveral was in the direction of Cuba. The launching time, June, 1961, fell shortly after the abortive invasion of Castro's domain. Secretary Rusk felt that we should not take the risk of irritating the bearded Communist dictator any further, or risk giving him the chance to accuse us of shooting nuclear devices over his Happily, the State Department was outvoted in the newly - established Council, and SNAP proved a success.

But now we have a decision by the Defense Department, backed by the White House, to the effect that this is as far as we go for awhile in putting nuclear items into Space - batteries, yes; (To be continued)

Cassock Flapped Around Legs

By JIM BISHOP

MADRID, Spain - The steps seemed endless. Directly ahead, a cassock flapped around the sturdy legs of Fray Justo Perez de Urbel, the middle - aged abbott of the monastery of the Benedictines. "Patience," he said, "a little more." A little more and we were at the top of La Nava and all Spain stretched out below like a wrinkled oriental rug.

The steps are too much for the heart as the vista is too much for the eyes. The mountain peaks were to the left and the right, diminishing with distance and changing in color from mocha to azure. Far below and off in the distance were roads, thin black scars going from nowhere to noth-

ONCE, these roads were of importance; so important that millions of Spanish brothers fought against each other for possession. Twenty-five years ago, the blood of Spain's fine young men dried on these roads, just as, one hundred years ago, the blood of Americans soaked into the loamy fields at Manassas.

The reason - if one can oversimplify - was a mistake in names. The government of Azana called itself Republican as it was being absorbed by the Communist cadres of Barcelona and Madrid. On the other side, Mussolini and Hitler thought they could absorb the rebellious generals -Mola, Franco, Moscardo, and leaders like Jose Antonio - into the monolith of fascism. Both were mistaken

For this, a million died in a national convulsion. The generals won the war. Franco won the peace. I stood looking out over the parapet at the summit of the mountain as the abbott, in limping English, explained by Fraco had built the thing which was under our feet inside the mountain - a cathedral longer than St. Peter's in Rome, called Valle de los Caidos - Valley of the

"It was in 1940," said the Fray, that Franco decided to build the basilica. Not for one side please to understand - but for both." He pointed below. "You have seen the Capilla del Sepulchro?" I nodded. "It is the side altar where the cross is bare and the dead Christ lies at the foot. Behind that wall, there are 30,000 soldiers of both sides buried in five galleries. I will show you.'

I WAS looking at the Guadarrama Mountains and thinking that, in the inexorability of time, even they are not permanent. "One day," I heard the Fray say, one day Franco put his arm around Moscardo and said: 'Pepe.

let us go to find the valley of the Moscardo was not enfallen.' because he knew that Franco likes to walk.

"Still, he went. They drove awhile, then they got out down there, and began to climb the mountains. This one to the left was the biggest, so the two generals climbed to the top. Franco saw a farmer and said: 'What do you call this mountain?' The man said: 'The loftiest:' Franco is not much to smile. But he smiled and 'It is an agreemable name, but I like that one.' He was pointing to this mountain.

'What do you call it?' he said. The farmer said: 'El Risco de la Nava.' Franco patted Moscardo on the back. 'That is the one,' he said. 'It overlooks the entire valley.' Because Generalissimo is the supreme, and sole authority in Spain, he could order a cathedral to be built inside a mountain."

SOLDIERS, laborers, architects, sculptors, prisoners, artists, engineers, stone cutters, dynamiters, draughtsmen in the scores of thousands worked for 20 years to make this monument. First they had to build roads and bridges through the passes to get to La Nava. Then they studied the gigantic boulders, aging smooth in the sun and the snow, and made test borings.

No matter how insoluble the problem, it was worked over by human intelligence and beaten into submission. For example, the ceiling of the cathedral consists of huge bracelets of smooth granite curving across the top. Between the bands are the actual boulders of the mountain. The engineers said that this would not do, because the moisture of the mountain peak would leak down into the cathedral. The problem appeared to be beyond solution. Then someone came up with the answer. Permit the mountain boulders to show through the ceiling, but, above them, build an air space between the boulders and

The cathedral is dry. I listened to the abbott. "How is it," I said, "that you were selected to head the monastery?" The dark eyes twinkled behind the steelrimmed glasses. "I met Franco once, a long time ago, at a festival. We did not meet again until years later. It was a surprise that he remembered.

"He came to me and said: What do you do now?" I said: 'I teach medieval history.' He laugh-'We must do something,' he said politely, 'to bring you down to current history. You will have charge of the Valley of the Fall-

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

TRAVELING COLDS

Colds and other respiratory tract infections are the largest sin gle disease problem of man. Most of us have one to three bouts of sore throat, sniffles, or bronchitis a year, lasting five to eight days. Recovery is the rule but the complications may be serious.

Colds travel in all circle of society and from one person to another within a short period of time. They are contagious and are passed along when the causative virus is inhaled or carried to the passe and mouth via to the nose and mouth via contaminated fingers or food.

This is the reasoning behind our plea to those with colds to avoid others, to cover the nose and mouth when sneezing or cough-ing, and to wash the hands frequently, particularly when handling food. Stay home when there is fever or symptoms are of more than average severity.

We must rely upon established remedies until a preventive or a cure is found. But be sensible and avoid nostrums that make millionaires out of those who promise 'prompt relief or cure."

Recovery is hastened by getting ample rest, additional fluids and moisture, and drugs that relieve congestion, sore throat, and other unpleasant symptoms. The wonder drugs should be reserved for complications or the more serious infections. Call your physician for expert advice - without fail, if fever persists more than two days. Most of us work to live and cannot avoid others who insist upon going to school or work despite everything. Some help can be obtained by remaining in top physical condition when colds are rife. Get enough sleep and avoid excesses. Avoid overheated and dry rooms which lower the resistance of the nasal membranes. Extra humidity can be obtained thru a commercial humidifier, turning on the hot water, or placing pans of water on the radiator. Get plenty of fresh air and exer-
